

Contents

Acknowledgements	VII
Plan of the book	VIII
Tables and figures	XI
Index of abbreviations	XII
Introduction	1
First Chapter
Theoretical approach and research design
1. The puzzle: Brazil's contribution to the constitution of a subregional security community and determination of its state of integration	5
2. State of research and further case selection	8
2.1. Competing explanations of security political cooperation in Southern Latin America: The need for deeper theoretical reflection	8
2.2. Further case selection and period of investigation: Argentina, Brazil and Chile since the system transformations to democracy	10
3. Theoretical approach: Overarching debates and constitutive elements of security political cooperation	11
3.1. Macro-theoretical debate	11
3.2. On the security community -approach	13
3.3. Other forms of security cooperation between states	17
4. A three-layered research design	18
4.1. Levels of analysis	18
4.2. Deriving and applying the working hypotheses	20
4.2.1. The level of analysis state and society	20
4.2.2. The level of analysis intraregional relations	21
4.2.3. The level of analysis international system	23
Second Chapter
Level of analysis state and society: Civil-military relations as a crucial factor for Brazil's security policy
1. Introduction	25

2. Democracy and political culture in Brazil	27
2.1. Definitions on civic culture research	27
2.2. Continuity and change of Brazil's political culture	30
3. Military, state and society in historical perspective: On the genesis of current civil-military relations in Brazil	32
3.1. The historical disproportion between state and society in Brazil and its consequence for the civil-military relations	32
3.2. Internal closure of the military institutions versus atomised civil society: Hierarchy and discipline as competitive advantages in the process of political transition	35
3.3. The roots of the current insufficient civil control: Political transition under conditions of military supremacy	35
4. The development of the Armed Forces' prerogatives in post-authoritarian Brazil	38
4.1. The concept of military prerogatives	38
4.2. Sarney: Laying down the prerogatives of the Armed Forces in the Constitution of 1988	39
4.3. Collor: Autocratic enclosure of authoritarian enclaves	44
4.4. Franco: Presidential weakness and repeated extension of the prerogatives	47
5. The military prerogatives in synchronic perspective: Cardoso's mixed balance sheet at the anchoring of civil control	49
5.1. The politics-dimension: Achilles' heel of the Cardoso-administration in the civil-military relations	50
5.1.1. Military wages and defence budget: Bribed into silence in the barracks?	50
5.1.2. The ambivalent attitude of the Armed Forces towards their new mission: Fighting against domestic crime	54
5.1.3. By force of arms against social movements? The Brazilian Army in the fight against the landless and striking workers	56
5.2. Institutional progresses: Law about Disappeared People, National Defence Policy and civilianly run Ministry of Defence	58
5.2.1. The Law of the Disappeared People	59
5.2.2. The Política de Defesa Nacional (PDN) from 1996	60
5.2.2.1. The contents of the PDN	61
5.2.2.2. A critical appreciation of the PDN	62
5.2.3. Threat scenarios and defence strategies of the Brazilian Armed Forces	63
5.2.3.1. The Armed Forces Joint Staff: Protection of the national sovereignty	63
5.2.3.2. The Brazilian Navy: Sheer rhetoric of deterrence	64
5.2.3.3. The Brazilian Air Force: Strategic discretion	66
5.2.3.4. The Brazilian Army: Foe image USA	66
5.2.4. Intermediate result: Multiplicity of actors as impediment on the way to a Brazilian white book on defence	68
5.2.5. The Brazilian Ministry of Defence: Development and role in the institutional system	70

5.2.5.1. The organisation of the new Ministry of Defence	73
5.2.5.2. The effects of the new Ministry of Defence on the civil-military relations	76
6. Brazil's system of national security - A survey	78
7. Reasons for intransparency and cacophony: Autonomy of the armed services and redundant institutions on the security sector	80
8. Military and Parliamentary control in Brazil	83
8.1. Theoretical remarks on the institutional context in Latin America	83
8.2. The policy of defence in Latin America	85
8.3. Competences and instruments of the Brazilian Defence Committees	87
8.4. Causes for the deficient legislative- and control function of the Brazilian Congress in the defence sector	90
8.5. Conclusion: Insufficient Parliamentary control over the security institutions	93
9. Military prerogatives and civil neglects: The consequences for Brazil's security political orientation at the beginning of the 21st century	94
9.1. The Brazilian Amazon region as local centre for the national threat perception	97
9.2. The participation in peace missions of the United Nations as a vital element of the national security strategy?	100
9.3. Enclosure of the national security risks by regional cooperation?	101

Third Chapter

Level of analysis intraregional relations: Brazil's regional security cooperation between bi- and multilateralism

1. Introduction	105
2. Bilateral relations between Argentina, Brazil and Chile in historic perspective	109
2.1. Foreign- and security political relations until the re-democratisation of the ABC-countries	109
2.1.1. Argentine-Brazilian relations	109
2.1.2. Argentine-Chilean relations	114
2.1.3. Brazilian-Chilean relations	116
2.2. Foreign- and security political relations between the ABC-countries since the transitions to democracy	117
2.2.1. Argentine-Brazilian relations	117
2.2.2. Argentine-Chilean relations	119
2.2.3. Brazilian-Chilean relations	120
3. Transparency in defence political core areas: Defence planning, arms trade and military budget	120

3.1. White books on defence	121
3.2. Mutual transparency in arms trade	124
3.3. Publication of the military budgets	126
3.4. Intermediate result: Insufficient transparency in the defence political core areas of the ABC-states	129
4. Brazil's defence political cooperation between dominant armed services and marked bilateralism	129
4.1. The special relationship between Argentina and Brazil	131
4.2. The Brazilian-Argentine Consultation and Coordination Mechanism for International Security- and Defence issues (MCC)	134
4.2.1. The operating level: Mecanismo de Análisis Estratégico (MAE)	135
4.2.2. Critical appreciation of MCC and MAE	137
4.3. The bilateral working groups for defence policy (GTBD)	138
4.3.1. Grupo de Trabalho Bilateral de Defesa between Brazil and Argentina	138
4.3.2. Grupo de Trabalho Bilateral de Defesa between Brazil and Chile	140
4.4. The military cooperation: Conferences, common manoeuvres, training cooperation, personnel exchange and technical collaboration	142
4.4.1. Confidence building measures of the Brazilian Army	143
4.4.2. Confidence building measures of the Brazilian Air Force	145
4.4.3. Confidence building measures of the Brazilian Navy	147
4.4.4. Confidence building measures of the Brazilian Joint General Staff	150
4.5. The UN-peace mission in Haiti: Heading towards a multilateral security- and defence policy led by Brazil?	151
4.6. Intermediate result: The starting institutionalisation of the Argentine-Brazilian axis	155
5. Multilateral containment of transnational threats: The institutionalisation of the security political cooperation in the Mercosur	157
5.1. The foreign political coordination in the Mercosur	159
5.2. The work of the Conference of the Home Secretaries of the Mercosur	161
5.2.1. The General Plan for Regional Security	165
5.2.2. The data bank for information relevant to the security (SISME)	166
5.2.3. The police cooperation on the operative level	168
5.2.4. The Mercosur-Centre for Police Training	169
5.3. Organized drug trafficking	170
5.4. International terrorism	172
5.5. Money laundering	175
5.6. Intermediate result: Heading towards a regional security policy	177
6. Impediments and perspectives on the way towards a subregional security community in the South of Latin America	179
6.1. National determining factors: Different degrees of civil supremacy in the ABC-states	179
6.2. Subregional security cooperation: Historic legacies and diverging policy goals	181
6.3. International system: The future role of the subregion	183

Fourth Chapter

Level of analysis international system: Global U.S. ambitions as window of opportunity for Brazil's positioning as cooperative regional power?

1. Introduction	185
2. Brazil's nuclear policy in the centre of the US-foreign- and security policy	189
2.1. Bilateral security relations after World War II: Brazil's futile waiting for U.S. nuclear know-how	189
2.2. Nuclear policy of the generals: Diversification of cooperation partners for the development of civil and military atomic technology	194
2.3. Nuclear policy of the New Republic : Re-rapprochement with the U.S. and imbedding into the network of international control regimes	196
2.4. Latest controversies over the Brazilian nuclear program: Strategic divergence of interest between Brasilia and Washington?	198
3. The consequences of September 11 – International terrorism and organised crime as driving forces of the Inter-American security relations?	204
3.1. Argentine, Brazilian and Chilean reactions to the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington	204
3.2. U.S. security policy post 09/11/2001: The US-American Latin America policy against the background of the “War against Terrorism” and the Iraq-intervention	208
3.3. New threat scenarios as a trigger for a new order of the Inter-American Security System?	210
3.3.1. The development of the Inter-American System until the suicide attacks of September 11	210
3.3.2. Reflection of September 11 and the reorientation of the U.S. security policy within the Inter-American Security System	212
3.4. Consequences of the new U.S. policy for the bilateral security relations between Brazil and the USA	217
3.4.1. Brazil's response to the Iraq-campaign and the rogue state -policy of the Bush administration	218
3.4.2. The Amazon as local centre of bilateral divergences: International drug trafficking and Plan Colombia	222
4. Brazil's interlocking with the international system	225
4.1. Brazil's contradictory role as advocate of a global governance-architecture and safeguard of national sovereignty	225
4.2. Brazil's economic integration on the hemispheric and global level: FTAA and WTO - Cooperation forums or conflict arenas?	228
4.3. Vision of a European-Latin American partnership: Underdeveloped security dialogue against the background of convergence of political interests	233
5. Intermediate result	237

Findings and perspectives

1. Brazil's comprehensive contribution to the emergence of a subregional security community	241
1.1. Restricted willingness for cooperation in state and society	241
1.2. Trusting and institutionalised intraregional relations	247
1.3. Brazil's establishing as cooperative regional power in the international system	253
2. Stage of development and perspectives of the subregional security community	258

Bibliography

1. Treaties, agreements, declarations and statistics	269
1.1. Brazil	269
1.2. Other countries	270
1.3. Bilateral agreements and declarations	272
1.4. Multilateral agreements and declarations	274
1.4.1. MERCOSUR	275
1.4.1.1. Agreements of the Reunión de Ministros del Interior	275
1.4.1.2. Meeting records of the Reunión de Ministros del Interior of the Mercosul	277
1.4.1.3. Decrees of the Consejo del Mercado Común (CMC)	277
1.4.1.4. Resolutions of the Grupo del Mercado Común (GMC)	278
1.4.1.5. Meeting Records of the Foro de Consulta y Concertación Política (FCCP)	279
1.4.1.6. Meeting Records of the Reunión Especializada de Drogas (RED)	279
1.4.2. Resolutions, reports and statistics of other international organisations	279
2. Secondary Literature	281
3. International Newspapers and Press Agencies	300
List of interview partners	302
Appendix	306