Content

Abstract 7

Editorial 17

1 Introduction 23
1.1 Aim of the book 26
1.2 Plan of the book 29

2 Lithuanian media under the effect of modernisation processes 33
2.1 Media systems convergence 33
2.2 A Multi-Channel-Society 38
2.3 Competition strategies 49
An economic lesson 50
Captured by the market 56
A technological challenge 59
Changes in the media's function 62

3 Towards a Lithuanian press: a historical insight 65
3.1 Language and press 66
3.2 The role of the press during the First Republic 68
3.3 The communist period and the emergence of a cultural sphere 73
3.4 Singing Revolution and the political breakthrough 78
3.5 Independence and paternalistic state 80
Political system and consensus making 80
The effects of political culture 82
3.6 Information and citizenship: types of public participation 85
3.7 Another kind of a public sphere 89

4 The libertarian model of the media 93
4.1 Media regulation: facts and figures 93
Who will watch over the media? 93
Fruits of liberal regulation 98
How self-regulation ought to work 100
Participation of the state in broadcast activities 103
State information policy 105
A regulation that "sleeps" 108

4.2 Regulation in practise 109
How to find consensus? 109
Long lasting public trust 110
Types of media right violations and attempts to impose stricter control 112
Impact on professionalism 115

5 Media structures 117
5.1 The evolution of a multi-coloured press 117
Applying the logic of business 118
Privatisation and its shades 120
Few owners are left 122
5.2 Transformation of television and radio 126
Lithuanian Radio and Television: facing challenges 126
Private broadcasters meet audience needs 129
5.3 The Internet media formation 131
Facing a new need to change 131
Technology enhances journalism 133
Online evolution 138
Trusting journalism online 141
5.4 Media development theory 142

6 New concerns: meeting the audience's needs 145
6.1 Feast of popular culture 146
6.2 Popular genres for ordinary people 150

7 Professionalisation of journalism 157
7.1 Media structures and the role of journalism: from strict control to liberalisation 157
Attempts to limit the interference of state into the matters of mass media 157
The impact of market and new technologies 159
7.2 Professional consolidation: from individual to orchestrated actions .. 161
7.3 Relationship with audience 163
Catering the public 164
Interacting with readers 165
7.4 Conclusion: Identifying problems 166

8 Summary: National characteristics of Lithuanian media 169

List of tables and figures 175

References 177

Journalism education institutions 187

Author 189