

Content

Introduction	11
1. The motivation for the study	11
2. Structure of this study	12
I. Theoretical principles	16
1. Power as a factor in international politics – Hans J. Morgenthau	16
2. Theories of human behaviour	19
2.1. Man's limitations – Reinhold Niebuhr	19
2.2. Every man against every man – Thomas Hobbes	19
2.3. Aggression as a means of self-preservation – Konrad Lorenz	20
2.4. The struggle for survival – Charles Darwin	21
3. The role of perception in international relations	23
3.1. The psychological approach – Herbert Kelman	23
3.2. The political approach – Robert Jervis	24
4. The oceans and the security of states	30
4.1. Control of the seas and national power – Alfred T. Mahan	30
4.2. The functions of naval forces – Dieter Mahncke and Hans-Peter Schwarz	33
4.3. The elements of naval power – Sergei G. Gorshkov	35
II. The Chinese navy	37
1. The history of the navy of the People's Republic of China	37
2. The command structure and dispositioning of naval forces	39
3. Ships and weapons systems	41
4. Military strategy	46
III. China's economic reforms and their effects	50
1. Economic restructuring and its causes	50

2.	The effects of the reforms on the national economy	56
3.	Coal as a source of energy	57
4.	The role of oil and gas in energy supplies	58
5.	The political and economic significance of Central Asia	60
6.	Chinas oceanic interests	64
	6.1. The development of international maritime law	65
	6.2. The People's Republic of China and its territorial claims	69
	6.3. China's maritime interests	71
IV.	China and the world	78
1.	The People's Republic of China and the international environment	78
2.	Relations with the USA	79
	2.1. The confrontation with Washington	80
	2.2. The break with the USSR and cooperation with the USA	84
	2.3. Bilateral relations and points of conflicts	95
	2.3.1. The Taiwan question	98
	2.3.2. The different political systems	105
3.	The relationship with Japan	112
	3.1. The historical legacy	112
	3.2. Japan as ally of the USA	113
	3.3. The Japanese-Chinese rapprochement	114
	3.4. Difficulties in the relationship between Beijing and Tokyo	115
V.	The effects of China's naval build-up	121
1.	Washington's strategic interests and the oceans	121
2.	Japan's existential dependence on sea routes	124
3.	The threat to Taiwan	130
	Conclusion	133
	Bibliography	137