

Contents

1.	Introduction	7
1.1.	Purpose of the study	10
2.	Personality and Politics	13
2.1.	Personality	14
2.1.1.	Personality, “personal background“, and “personal interests“	15
2.1.2.	Identity	17
2.2.	Representation	20
2.2.1.	The concept of representation	20
2.2.2.	Representation and the personal background	23
2.3.	The Personal and the Political – hypotheses	28
3.	Institutional Opportunities	30
3.1.	Institutional structures and political behavior	31
3.1.1.	Parliamentary and presidential democracy – general typological aspects	31
3.1.1.1.	Parliamentary democracy and political behavior	33
3.1.1.2.	Personal interests in the German Bundestag	35
3.1.1.3.	Guaranteed representation in the German Bundestag	39
3.1.1.4.	Presidential democracy and political behavior	40
3.1.1.5.	Personal interests in the US Congress	42
3.1.1.6.	Guaranteed representation in the US Congress	48
3.2.	Structures and representation of personal interests in Germany and the US – hypotheses	49
4.	Personal background and legislative behavior – comparing the German Bundestag and the US Congress	53
4.1.	Design of the study	53
4.2.	Method and problems	55
4.3.	Operationalization	59
4.4.	Findings	64
4.4.1.	US legislators	65
4.4.2.	German legislators	83
4.5.	Constraints and guarantees vs. opportunities and pressures	92
5.	Electoral incentives and symbolic representation	95
5.1.	Party versus voters – sources of pressures and constraints in Germany and the U.S.	96
5.2.	The descriptive-symbolic link	100
5.3.	Is the Personal political?	103
6.	Bibliography	107
	Appendix A – detailed results	112
	Appendix B – questionnaire	129