Table of Contents

1 Introduction: Learning in Modern International Society 11

1.1.1 Purpose of the Study 15

2 Constructing International Politics 17

2.1.1 Actor Autonomy: Rationalism or Constructivism? 19
2.1.2 Structural Examination: Individualism or Holism? 21

2.2 Norms and Values as Social Structure 23
2.2.1 Externally driven Norms and Units of Analysis 24
2.2.2 International Socialisation and the Diffusion of Norms 26

2.3 Learning in International Politics 29
2.3.1 Causal Impetuses for Learning 30
2.3.2 Progress in International Politics? 32
2.3.3 A Definition of Learning 33

2.4 Requirements 35

2.5 Summary 36

3 Cases of International Learning 37

3.1.1 Positivist Qualitative Design: Process Tracing 37
3.1.2 Case Selection: Similarity 38
3.1.3 Operationalisation of Cases of Learning 40
3.1.4 Limitations of Process Tracing in Similar Cases 40

4 The World Bank and Global Poverty Alleviation 43

4.1.1 Global Poverty Trends 43
4.1.2 The Global Poverty Concern before 1945 45
4.1.3 Poverty Alleviation in International Politics 46
4.1.4 Poverty Alleviation Strategies as Learning Process 48

4.2 Primary Learning: The Development of Poverty Alleviation Initiatives 50
4.2.1 From Provincial Philanthropy to an International Concern 51
4.2.2 Bretton Woods 53
4.2.3 From European Recovery to Development and Poverty Alleviation. 55

4.3 Secondary Learning: Adopting Global Poverty Alleviation 60
4.3.1 Nation-States and Anti-Poverty Commitment 62
4.3.2 World Conferences and Non-Governmental Aid 64
4.3.3 'Make Poverty History' 67

4.4 Conclusion 70

5 Global Governance and the International Criminal Court 73

5.1.1 Global Governance in the 21st Century 73
5.1.2 The International Community before 1919 74
5.1.3 International Jurisdiction in International Politics 76
5.1.4 International Jurisdiction as Learning Process 78

5.2 Primary Learning: Consolidating International Jurisdiction 80
5.2.1 Legal Universalisation and the Regulation of Warfare 81
5.2.2 Textual Expansion and International Crime 84
5.2.3 Institutional Deepening and the Consolidation of Knowledge 87

5.3 Secondary Learning: Promoting Global Governance 90
5.3.1 State Modalities of Implementation 91
5.3.2 Cooperation with Regional and International Organisations 94
5.3.3 A Societal Coalition for an International Criminal Court 96

5.4 Conclusion 98

6 Global Civil Society and the Prevention of Armed Conflict 101

6.1.1 The Changing Face of Warfare 101
6.1.2 Traditional Global Threats before the End of the Cold War 103
6.1.3 Civil Conflict Prevention in International Politics 105
6.1.4 Civil Conflict Prevention as Learning Process 107

6.2 Primary Learning: The Evolution of Civil Society Organisations 109
6.2.1 Civil Society from Service Orientation to Political Involvement 110
6.2.2 The International Crisis (Alert) Group 113
6.2.3 Expanding the Focus: Crisis Watch and Early Warning 116

6.3 Secondary Learning: Accepting New Security Threats 119
6.3.1 Utilisation of International Crisis Group Information by States 121
6.3.2 International Organisations and Global Civil Society Partnerships 125
6.3.3 Global Civil Conflict Prevention 127

6.4 Conclusion 129

7 Findings: Changing and Adapting International Norms and Values ... 133

7.1.1 From Idiosyncrasies to Generalisations 135
7.1.2 Tensions, Contradictions and Obstructions 138
7.1.3 Norms and Values in International Society 140

7.2 Cognitive Problem Solving through Learning 142

7.3 Learning in International Relations 145

Bibliography 151