

Contents

Vorwort	5
List of Abbreviations	11
1 Introduction	15
1.1 Research questions, theoretical framework and results of the study	15
1.2 Case selection	19
1.3 Applied method	21
1.4 Covered policy dimensions	21
1.5 Plan of the study	23
2 Historical development of party competition and coalition politics	25
2.1 Ireland: Fianna Fáil vs. the rest?	27
2.1.1 Historical development and cultural constraints on Irish coalition politics	27
2.1.2 Institutional constraints on Irish party competition and coalition politics	36
2.2 Germany: a stable party system with a stable coalition culture	39
2.2.1 Historical development and cultural constraints on German coalition politics	39
2.2.2 Institutional constraints on party competition and coalition politics in Germany	47
2.3 Austria: the dominance of the grand coalition culture	52
2.3.1 Historical development and cultural constraints on Austrian coalition politics	52
2.3.2 Institutional constraints on Austrian party competition and coalition politics	58
2.4 The Netherlands: stability and change of party competition and coalition culture in a segmented society	61

2.4.1	Historical development and cultural constraints on Dutch coalition politics	61
2.4.2	Institutional constraints on Dutch party competition and coalition politics	71
2.5	Belgium: party competition and coalition politics in a divided country	75
2.5.1	Historical development and cultural constraints on Belgian coalition politics	75
2.5.2	Institutional constraints on Belgian party competition and coalition politics	85
2.6	Comparative perspective and open questions	89
3	Theory and Model: What determines coalition formation, assertion potential and the programmatic positioning of political parties?	90
3.1	Coalition formation, assertiveness and tactical programmatic positioning as patterns of coalition politics	90
3.2	Theories of coalition formation and the pay-off structure in coalition governments	94
3.3	Multidimensional models of party competition and coalition formation	98
3.4	Approaches in analysing payoffs in coalition governments	104
3.5	Institutional and semi-institutional accounts on coalition politics	107
3.5.1	The institutional perspective	108
3.5.2	The behaviouralist perspective	112
3.6	Bringing office-, policy- and (semi-)institutional perspectives together: an extended model of coalition politics	118
4	Method and Data	132
4.1	Methods for estimating programmatic positions of political actors	132
4.1.1	Analysis of roll call voting	132
4.1.2	Position extraction from elite studies and regular surveys	133
4.1.3	Expert surveys	134
4.1.4	Analysis of policy documents	136
4.1.5	Wordscore – combining expert judgements with computer-aided content analysis	141
4.2	Overview of the data	147
4.2.1	Social democratic and moderate socialist parties	148
4.2.2	Christian democratic and Christian social parties	150

4.2.3	Liberal parties	153
4.2.4	Green parties	155
4.2.5	Parties from the “old” and “new left”	157
4.2.6	Right-wing populist parties	158
5	Analysis	162
5.1	Coalition formation	162
5.2	Programmatic positions and issue saliency of coalition agreements	177
5.3	Which parties are pivotal?	181
5.4	Policy- and office assertion potential	185
5.4.1	Policy assertion potential	185
5.4.2	Patterns of office allocation	190
5.5	Tactical programmatic behaviour of political parties	194
6	Conclusion	201
6.1	Summary of the findings	201
5.2	Incentives for future research	203
	References	207