

Contents

Introductory Overview .....	17
A general review of the literature on Lebanon .....	21
Statement of the problem .....	27
Hypotheses and study structure .....	28
Long-term implications and contributions of the study .....	31
The method of research .....	32
Further methods of inquiry .....	33
1. Review and Critique of the Literature on Consociational Democracy .....	35
Theorizing consociationalism: The evolution of the theory .....	40
Consociational democracy as a prescriptive model in deeply fragmented societies .....	45
The other side of the medal .....	47
A criticism of the consociational model .....	48
A criticism of the consociational theory .....	54
Lijphart's reaction: A struggle against all odds? .....	70
The survivability of consociational democracy .....	73
The consociational model and its relation to our case study .....	75
2. Pre-War Lebanon: A Dance into the Abyss of Consociationalism .....	77
Consociational democracy in pre-war Lebanon: The characteristics of the model .....	77
The factors conducive to consociational democracy: Why are they problematic? .....	79
Performance of the pre-war consociational model (1943–1975) .....	85
The strengths of the pre-war consociational model .....	86
The defects of the pre-war consociational model .....	93
An inevitable collapse? An inquiry into the reasons behind consociational failure .....	102
A zone of turbulences .....	114
The elite factor in the consociational breakdown (1967–1976) .....	126
The economic factor in the consociational breakdown .....	130
Synthesis: The status of the favorable factors revisited .....	135

3. Post-War Lebanon: The Lost Republic's Peregrinations . . . . .	137
The rise of a competitive semi-authoritarian regime (1990–2005) . . . . .	137
The deconstruction of the democratic myth in the Second Republic . . . . .	139
The transition paradigm . . . . .	143
Hybrid regimes, types and characteristics . . . . .	145
Lebanon in the transition paradigm: A peculiar tale . . . . .	157
The architecture of semi-authoritarianism: The indicators (1990–2004) . . . . .	158
The Ta'if setting, background and aftermath . . . . .	159
The truncated implementation of the Ta'if agreement . . . . .	164
Syrian predominance and the Lebanese-Syrian riddle of semi-authoritarianism (1976–2004) . . . . .	176
Post-war elections: A tool of semi-authoritarianism . . . . .	195
Points of elite authority . . . . .	207
The triumph of authoritarian pressures in 2004 . . . . .	225
Synthesis: The games that Lebanese semi-authoritarianism played . . . . .	243
4. Post-War Lebanon's Long and Perilous Road to Democracy . . . . .	245
Lebanese democracy: A question of relativity? . . . . .	246
Democratic pressures in the 1990s . . . . .	249
The endurance of the Lebanese civil society . . . . .	249
Political opposition . . . . .	251
The role of religious elites . . . . .	253
The 2000 opening . . . . .	254
A gust of political liberty after 2000? . . . . .	256
The limitations and aftermath of the 2000 opening . . . . .	258
Lebanon's 2005 transition: the end of the competitive authoritarian regime? . . . . .	261
The 2005 awakening and its underlying motives: The first signs of transition . . . . .	262
Second phase of the democratic awakening . . . . .	279
The backstory of the Beirut Spring: A critique . . . . .	285
Third phase of the transition: Augurs of institutional revival . . . . .	290
Fourth phase of the transition: Syria's departure or the 'end of the affair' . . . . .	292
Fifth phase of the transition: Lebanon's summer parliamentary elections . . . . .	294
The first post-Syrian coalition cabinet and its difficult birth . . . . .	302
The international probe into Hariri's Killing: Towards more transparency? . . . . .	305
The opposite side of the coin or the persistence of authoritarian waves . . . . .	309
Residues of the Lebanese-Syrian constellation and surviving loyalties . . . . .	309
An evaluation of Lebanon's transition to a low-intensity democracy . . . . .	317
Analysis of Lebanon's path to system transition in 2005 . . . . .	318
Rethinking Lebanon's minimal democracy: A looming backlash? . . . . .	323
A long road ahead . . . . .	324

5. What about Post-War Consociationalism? .....	327
The rise of a ‘chaperoned’ power-sharing model: The failure of grand coalitions under Syrian tutelage (1990–2005) .....	328
The Troika or the oligarchic elite cartel: Its effects on coalition-building and institutions (1992–1998) .....	330
The emergence of a shadow government: A case of “coercive consociationalism” .....	336
The gradual breakdown of the security state and the rise of a bipolar model of consociationalism .....	344
The national political schism: A study of prevailing political cleavages . . . .	345
The implications of political cleavages on power-sharing .....	357
Coalition building during the phase of bipolarity .....	358
Synthesis: Prerequisites and devices of consociational democracy at peril . .	360
Augurs of a power-sharing reawakening? .....	361
The resilience of Lebanese consociationalism .....	362
The 2005 Beirut Spring: Low-intensity power-sharing .....	363
The partial revival of consociational devices in the post-Syrian era .....	368
Demystifying the 2005 power-sharing revival .....	371
Consociation in difficulty: Shaky patterns of elite accommodation .....	371
Lebanon’s shackled foreign policy: The impossible condition of non-alignment and the increase of external burdens on the porous republic after 2005 .....	391
Communal segmentation in post-war Lebanon .....	409
Dark clouds over Lebanon’s consociationalism .....	419
6. Final Appraisal .....	425
Crafting a Consociational Democracy: The Limits of the ‘Self-Negating Prophecy’ .....	425
The prospects for Lebanon’s consociational democracy .....	429
Reinventing consociationalism: For a gradualist path .....	430
Consociational challenges: How to turn a low-intensity model of power-sharing into a viable democracy? .....	432
Institutional engineering: Synchronizing democracy and power-sharing . . .	432
Institutionalized deadlock-breaking mechanisms .....	433
A solution to communal desegmentation .....	435
Reformulating the problem of national identity .....	442
An external or internal solution to Lebanon’s oppressive alignment?: The making of a cautious foreign policy .....	447
An ill-timed reform for an agonizing consociation? .....	452

---

Bibliography .....	455
Consociational theory .....	455
Democracy and democratic transition .....	459
Pre- and post-war Lebanon .....	462
Country review .....	475
Politics and system transition in the Middle East .....	476