

Table of Contents

List of Abbreviations	11
-----------------------	----

Introduction	15
---------------------	-----------

Julia Lieb, Nicolai von Ondarza, Daniela Schwarzer

1 EU external action and the reforms of the Lisbon Treaty	16
2 Analysing external representation beyond traditional foreign policy	21
2.1 Energy and climate policy	23
2.2 Trade	25
2.3 Economics and finance	26
2.4 Labour and social policy	27
3 External representation under the Lisbon Treaty – the way ahead	29

I ENERGY AND CLIMATE	35
-----------------------------	-----------

A modern European external Energy Policy: from pixelisation to high definition	37
---	-----------

Sami Andoura

1 Introduction	37
2 Lessons from the past: A laborious process	39
2.1 The late acknowledgement of energy as a matter of EU external relations	39
2.2 Energy security: the emergence of a European energy strategic thinking	40
2.3 An external policy to serve Europe's energy interests	41
2.4 The European Security Strategy and its subsequent revision: a missed opportunity	42
3 Perspectives for the development of an EU external energy policy	44
3.1 A fragmented block of 27 different national policies	44
3.2 Lack of coherence between EU energy policy and other EU external policies	45
3.3 Key dimension: diversification of energy sources and resources	46
3.4 Energy crisis management: the need for solidarity	47

4 Short and long term approaches: potential of the Lisbon Treaty and options beyond	48
4.1 A case for European energy diplomacy	48
4.2 Moving towards a 'European Energy Community' with external competence	49
5 Conclusion – a common answer to common challenges	50

The EU's representation in global climate governance: lessons from the past, prospects for the future 53

Simon Schunz

1 Introduction	53
2 The EU's representation in global climate governance: from Chantilly to Copenhagen	56
2.1 Putting the Troika in charge (1995-2000)	56
2.2 In search for continuity – a greater role for the Commission and broadened outreach (2001-2003)	58
2.3 Coping with greater complexity – deepened and broadened external representation (2004-2009)	59
3 The current and future shape of EU representation in global climate governance with the Lisbon Treaty	62
3.1 The legal framework provided by the Lisbon Treaty	62
3.2 EU external representation in global climate politics in the year 2010	64
3.3 The EU's future representation in global climate governance: three scenarios	64
4 Conclusion	68

The EU role within the changing governance of climate change 71

Antonio Villafranca, Antonio Pavanello

1 Introduction	71
2 The three-level governance model in international climate change policy	72
2.1 Factor facilitating the success stories of Kyoto and Montreal	74
2.2 Weaknesses of the current governance model	75
3 Searching for a new governance of climate change	77
4 Towards a horizontal governance	79
4.1 The future role of the G20 and the UN in climate change governance	81
5 Lessons for the EU: towards a new strategy	82

II TRADE	85
EU Trade Policy and the Treaty of Lisbon	87
Stephen Woolcock
1 Introduction	87
2 The main changes brought about by the Treaty	88
2.1 Clarification of EU competence	88
2.2 An enhanced role for the European Parliament	89
2.3 Trade included in external action	91
3 Implications	92
3.1 Short-term implementation issues	92
3.2 Medium-term issues	94
3.3 Discussion of the long-term impact on the role of the EU in the world?	96
4 Conclusions	97
 The EU as a friend of the developing world? Self-portrayal and outside perceptions in the negotiations of EPAs	 99
Clara Weinhardt
1 Introduction	99
2 What are Economic Partnership Agreements?	101
3 Analytical framework: on examining perceptions	102
4 The EU's self-portrayal	105
4.1 Actor orientation	105
4.2 Negotiation principles	107
5 West African perceptions of the EU's role	108
5.1 Actor orientation	108
5.2 Negotiation principles	110
6 Conclusion	112

From polyphony to harmony? The external representation of EMU 117

Gabriel Glöckler, Zbigniew Truchlewski

1 Introduction	117
1.1 A snapshot of the current situation	118
1.2 The legal framework – allocation of competencies in the EU	120
2 The evolution of the external representation of EMU	123
2.1 The 1990s – a belated start	123
2.2 Incremental change (1999-2007)	124
2.3 Since 2007 – imposing change from outside	126
3 Prospects for a more unified external representation	129
3.1 Obstacles to a unified external representation of EMU	130
3.2 Arguments in favour of a unified external representation of EMU	133
3.3 Possible templates: should EMU emulate trade policy?	134
4 Conclusion	136

A consolidated representation of interests in the context of Europe's relative economic decline – drivers and obstacles 137

Daniela Schwarzer

1 Introduction	137
2 Backed against the wall? Europe's declining economic power base	138
2.1 Europe's relative loss in economic weight	139
2.2 Pressure on public finances	141
2.3 The declining normative leadership of the West	144
2.4 Political consequences of the relative decline	145
3 Dynamics in the global financial and economic governance fora	146
3.1 The G7/8 and the G20	146
3.2 The reforms of the IMF quotas	147
3.3 Further adaptations are to come	148
3.4 An evolving international agenda	149
4 Internal dynamics: governance reform and policy divergence	151
4.1 Governance reforms promoting more external coherence	151
4.2 Remaining divergences impacting external representation	151
– an example	151
5 Future perspectives: One seat, one voice, one position?	153

IV LABOUR AND SOCIAL POLICY	157
Challenges to coherence: exploring the European Union's role in the International Labour Organization	159
Bregt Saenen, Jan Orbie
1 Introduction	159
2 The expanding role of the EU in the ILO	160
3 Challenges to the 'harmonious' EU-ILO relationship	162
3.1 Vertical coherence: EU competences and ambitions	163
3.2 Horizontal coherence and the EU market model	166
3.3 Multilateral coherence and the EU's global normative power	169
4 The EU with Lisbon	171
Employment and social policy: From the internal to the external dimension	175
Rudi Delarue
1 Introduction	175
2 Lessons from past experiences of EU external representation in employment and social policy	176
3 Employment and social policy in EU external relations with the Lisbon Treaty	178
4 Are the external and internal dimensions coherently interlinked?	180
EU participation in ILO standard-setting	183
Gisbert Brinkmann
1 The ILO framework for standard-setting in labour and social policy	183
2 Social policy in the EU with the Lisbon Treaty	185
3 The participation of the EU in the ILO	186
3.1 Subsidiarity of the EU and operability of the ILO	187
3.2 Standard-setting of the ILO and EU representation	188
4 Conclusion	190
List of Contributors	191