

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	9
I. Introduction	11
1.1. Understanding Security and Security Cooperation	11
1.2. Cooperative Security: An Approach to Regional Security Cooperation	14
1.2.1. Introducing the Concept	14
1.2.2. Comparison with Other Concepts of Security Cooperation	17
1.2.3. Problems and Confusion	19
1.3. Methods and Design	20
1.3.1. Conceptual Analysis	20
1.3.2. Case Study	24
1.3.3. Analytical Tools	26
1.4. Outline	28

Part One

Cooperative Security: A Conceptual Analysis

II. Explaining Regional Security Cooperation: A Constructivist Approach to Security Studies	31
2.1. Constructivism and International Security	31
2.1.1. Normative and Ideational Structures of International Security	34
2.1.2. The Role of Identity	37
2.1.3. Agent-Structure Dynamics in International Security	39
2.1.4. A Constructivist Perspective on Security Cooperation	40
2.1.4.1. Defining Security Cooperation	41
2.1.4.2. The Emergence of Security Cooperation	42
2.2. Further Perspectives on Security Cooperation	43
2.2.1. Security Community and Constructivism	44
2.2.1.1. Main Principles of a Security Community	45
2.2.1.2. The Development of a Security Community	48
2.2.2. Regime Theory and Constructivism	51
2.2.2.1. Defining International Regime	54
2.2.2.2. Security Regimes	58
2.2.2.3. International Regime and Sovereignty	59
2.3. Regional Security Cooperation	61

2.3.1. Defining a Region	61
2.3.2. The Security Dimension of Regionalisation	63
2.4. Chapter Conclusion	64
III. Cooperative Security: A Conceptual Analysis	66
3.1. Scholarly Usage and Region-based Concepts	67
3.1.1. Scholarly Usage	68
3.1.1.1. Scholarly Usage - International Relations	68
3.1.1.2. Scholarly Usage - Security Studies	71
3.1.2. Region-based Concepts	73
3.1.2.1. Cooperative Security in Europe	74
3.1.2.2. Cooperative Security in the Asia-Pacific	76
3.1.2.3. Cooperative Security in Other Regions	82
3.1.3. Examining the Different Usages and Concepts: The Main Findings	83
3.2. The Evolving Concept of Cooperative Security	85
3.2.1. Introducing the Variables	86
3.2.2. Threat Perception	86
3.2.2.1. The Concept of Security and Threat Perception	88
3.2.2.2. Identity and Threat Perception	90
3.2.2.3. Scope of Threat: The Increase of Transnational Threat	92
3.2.3. Norm Generation	95
3.2.3.1. Various Forms of Norm Generation	97
3.2.3.2. Norm Contestation and Norm Localisation	100
3.2.4. Concepts of Cooperative Security: The Analysis and Main Hypothesis	103
3.3. Chapter Conclusion	105

Part Two

Illustrating the Concept: Practices of Cooperative Security in East Asia

IV. Trilateral Cooperation in the Straits of Malacca and Singapore	109
4.1. Maritime Security in Southeast Asia	109
4.2. Responding to Maritime Security Threats: Limits of Regional Cooperation	112
4.2.1. An Historical Overview on Regional Security Cooperation in Southeast Asia	113
4.2.2. Regional Security Cooperation in Southeast Asia since 2000: Closer Cooperation in Maritime Security	119
4.2.3. The Malacca Strait Patrol (MSP) Initiative	123

4.3.	Trilateral Cooperation in the Straits of Malacca and Singapore: A Practice of Cooperative Security	126
4.3.1.	Responding to the Increase in Transnational Threats	126
4.3.2.	A Higher Level of Cooperation: A Consequence of the Interplay between the Changes in Threat Perception and the Changes in Norms	128
4.4.	Chapter Conclusion	130
V.	ASEAN-China Security and Political Cooperation	131
5.1.	East Asia: An Overview of Regional Dynamics	132
5.2.	ASEAN-China Relations	134
5.2.1.	ASEAN-China Relations in the 1990s: Normalisation and Engagement	134
5.2.1.1.	The Rise of China and Engagement with Southeast Asia	136
5.2.1.2.	ASEAN Plus Three	137
5.2.1.3.	ASEAN Regional Forum	139
5.2.2.	ASEAN-China Relations after 2000: Further Institutionalisation Efforts	140
5.2.2.1.	The South China Sea Dispute: The Declaration of the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea (DOC) and the Guidelines for the Implementation of the DOC	142
5.2.2.2.	East Asia Summit	144
5.3.	ASEAN-China Security and Political Cooperation: A Practice of Cooperative Security	148
5.3.1.	Normative Changes	149
5.3.2.	A Broader Concept of Security and the Preference for Multilateralism: The Interplay between the Changes in Threat Perception and the Changes in Norms	152
5.4.	Chapter Conclusion	155
VI.	Findings and Conclusion	156
6.1.	Key Findings and Contribution	156
6.2.	Further Studies on Cooperative Security	160
	Bibliography	162