

Table of Contents

Prefaces 17

José Antonio Monago, President of the Board of Trustees of the European Academy of Yuste Foundation and President of the Government of Extremadura

Iñigo Méndez de Vigo, Secretary of State for the European Union. Government of Spain

Jaume Duch Guillot, Director for Media and Spokesman. European Parliament

Frans de Ruiter, President of the European House for Culture, (Brussels); Kathrin Deventer, Chair of the Working Group on Audience Participation of the European Access to Culture Platform; Miguel Ángel Martín Ramos, Spokesperson of the European Access to Culture Platform

FIRST PART: PROJECT AND PROCESS. ANALYSIS OF A KEY STAGE THAT ESTABLISHES THE MODEL IN THE EUROPEAN PROJECT AND IN ITS PROCESS

CHAPTER 1. A Convention to draft the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union.

Proposals from Civil Society 35

1.1. Introduction: The Charter of Fundamental Rights within the Framework of the IGC 2000, the Dialogue on Europe and the Treaty of Nice..... 35

1.2. Towards a Charter of Fundamental Rights for Europe: A Milestone – The Convention..... 38

1.3. The Public Debate with Civil Society and with Non-Governmental Organizations
During the Charter’s Drafting Process 42

1.4. The Permanent Forum of Civil Society: Proposals 45

1.4.1. Dignity 50

1.4.2. Liberty 53

1.4.3. Equality..... 56

1.4.4. Solidarity 57

Conclusions: The Charter of Fundamental Rights for Europe – The Proposals of NGOs: The Establishment of a Precedent in the Process	63
--	----

CHAPTER 2. The Convention and the Draft European Constitution: The Initiation of a Constituent Process	75
2.1. Introduction: The European Convention, a Brave Initiative	75
2.2. The Treaty of Nice, the Declaration of Laeken and the Antecedents to the Constitutional Debate	76
2.3. Civil Society: Proposals for a Convention Method	81
2.4. The Convention: An innovative Body Centred on Public Debate, Democracy and Transparency	88
2.5. The Forum: Interface Between Civil Society, Organisations and the Convention	92
2.6. Civil Society Contact Groups and their Proposals to the Convention: Social Sector, Environment, Academia, Citizens and Institutions, Regions and Local Authorities, Human Rights, Development and Culture	96
2.7. Civil Society in the Listening and Reflection Phases – New Synergies: Participatory Democracy, Civil Dialogue, Horizontal Subsidiarity and Solidarity	101
2.8. Contributions from Civil Society to the Preliminary Draft Constitutional Treaty	111
2.9. Comments Made by Civil Society Platforms and Movements Regarding the Preliminary Draft Constitutional Treaty and how they are Reflected in the European Constitution	112
Conclusions: Participation of Civil Society and Democratisation of the Policy Creation Process: Overcoming the Intergovernmental System and the Initiation of a Participatory Method	122

SECOND PART: CITIZENS, DEMOCRACY, PARTICIPATION. COMMUNICATION AS A EUROPEAN LEGITIMISING RESOURCE

CHAPTER 3. European Citizenship: Participation and Communication for a New Way of Engaging in Politics	129
3.1. Introduction: The Axes that form the Basis of a New Type of European Politics	129
3.2. New Spaces and Online Resources	131
3.3. The Communicative Creativity of Institutions	132
3.4. Projects Promoting European Public Areas	134

3.5. 2009 Elections to the European Parliament.....	136
3.6. The Message of National Political Parties for the European Elections	142
3.7. From a European Model of Debate to a European Communication Policy	144
Conclusions: Citizens Who Are Responsible and Promote Integration	145
CHAPTER 4. Concrete Results that Establish a Tendency	149
4.1. Introduction: Where Are We? Where Are We Going to?.....	149
4.2. European Integral Communication.....	150
4.3. 2002-2012: The European Citizens' Initiative Process	152
4.4. Reset Europe.....	154
4.5. Integration in the EU: Recovering the "Great Politics" and Communicating it	156
4.6. Europe Votes for Europe: 2014, Elections to the European Parliament.....	161
EPILOGUE
Europe Now	167

The creation of the European Union, which has already fought, can be considered one of the greatest achievements in European history. It is a concept embodied in the very spirit of the European Union itself. Because, at a time when the world was divided into two camps, with the European Union, we have a common language, common values, and a common future. We are not asking for more, we are asking for more. Today, the idea is a challenge and a new step, a step that can be fully enjoyed by citizens of all member states of the European Union.

European citizenship has been an important help in creating and divisive frontiers of both a strong and weak nature. Even though the process has been a complex one, it has led to a new era, not only in terms of rights, but also in terms of the role of citizens. The legal assistance of their rights as citizens has not been used, but it has also gained a participation position in the society of all Europeans. The rights that European citizenship give us, we have beyond the biggest challenges that it entails.

However, if the concept of citizenship has given us a new idea, it is the possibility of participation and being active in a vibrant and democratic process that has never before in our history. The possibility of participation and being active has in the last few decades been considered an important and recognized goal for the common good.