

Contents

Preface	v
Maps, Images and Tables	ix
Introduction	1
CHAPTER I: TERRITORIAL STATES AND IMAGINED REGIONS IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS	13
1.1. The notion of space in International Relations	13
1.2. A critique of the ‘territorial trap’ in International Relations	29
1.3. The ‘territorial trap’ within a regional scope: the case of Central Asia	34
CHAPTER II: THREE DIMENSIONS OF THE ‘FIVE STANS’ DISCOURSE AND ITS CONTEXTUAL STRUCTURES	47
2.1. The ‘five stans’ discourse within the positivist approach dimension	47
2.2. The five stans as ‘containers’ of Turkic-speaking peoples	56
2.3. The ‘five stans’ discourse as the ‘heartland’	68
CHAPTER III: EURASIANISM VERSUS EURASIANISM: FROM A STATIC UNDERSTANDING OF THE CONCEPT TO A LANGUAGE-IN-USE	87
3.1. What is Eurasianism?	88
3.2. Eurasianism-in-use	98
3.3. The Eurasian Customs Union between Kazakhstan, Russia and Belarus	109

CHAPTER IV: CONCLUSION. A EURASIAN
FUNCTIONAL SPACE

123

Bibliography

139

1

13

13

22

34

47

47

56

68

87

88

98

109