

The Table of Contents

Acknowledgments	11
------------------------------	----

Introduction	13
---------------------------	----

Part One: A Portrait of Social Activism in Contemporary Belarus

Chapter I. Before the Tent Camp in 2006	23
--	----

1. The Communist Legacy: Mass Activism from Late Perestroika to the Fall of the USSR.....	23
i. Introductory Remarks: A Comparison with Poland in the Transition Period.....	23
ii. The Perestroika Crisis, Chernobyl and Actions of 1988–1990	31
iii. Street Politics and the Collapse of the USSR: Actions of 1991	42
2. From the Rise to the Stagnation of Activism 1992–2005	47
i. The Democratic Opening and the Rise of Lukashenko to Power (1992–1995)	47
ii. “Hot Spring” and “Hot Autumn” of 1996: The Struggle against the Establishment of the Union State	53
iii. The Routinization of the Mass Protests (1997–2000).....	61
iv. The Decline of Protest Potential (2001–2005).....	72

Chapter II. The Tent Camp as Evidence of Social Activism	85
---	----

1. The Background and Data of the Tent Camp	85
i. General Background and Data Sources.....	85
ii. Internet Development in Belarus by 2006.....	87
2. The Emergence of the Tent Camp	92

i.	The Four Days of the Tent Camp	93
ii.	The Peculiar Traits of the Belarusian Tent Camp in 2006.....	103

Part Two: The Tent Camp as a Social and Political Laboratory for Deleuzian Concepts

Chapter I. Theoretical Tools for Analyzing Contemporary Social Movements

1.	Social Processes in Network Dimension: The Directions of Analysis.....	111
i.	Research in the New Social Movement	111
ii.	Network as a Social Metaphor: Towards New Sociality in the Context of Globalization Processes	117
iii.	The Deleuzian Concept of the Virtual: Beyond the Nodes	125
2.	Radical Democracy vs. Deleuzian Concepts.....	134
i.	Rhizomorphic Collective Identities of Contemporary Social Movements.....	135
ii.	The Deployment of Radical Democracy on the Internet.....	139

Chapter II. Molarization and Molecular Processes of the Tent Camp.....

	Introductory Remarks	149
1.	The Applicability of Western Theories to the Belarusian Case	152
2.	Symbolic Strategies Used by the Movement	167
3.	The Representation (Molarizaion) of the Tent Camp by the State Media: The Analysis of Sovetskaya Belorussiya's Hegemonic Discourse	172
4.	Molarization Processes: Protest, Bureaucracy, Resolution	181
5.	Analyzing the Molecular Processes of the Tent Camp	193
i.	Flash Mobs.....	193

ii. Slogans 198
iii. The Intensification of Political Problems..... 201

Summary: The Strengths and Weaknesses of Protest Organization via the Internet Revealed by the Tent Camp..... 207

Final Remarks 209

Bibliography 217

Appendix..... 233